SHORT REPORT

Title: Inclusive Workshop on Community-based Governance in Flooded Savannahs

On March 20th, 2019 the Leibniz Centre for Agricultural Landscape Research (ZALF) and the Humboldt University of Berlin (HU) with the support of Fundación Horizonte Verde (FHV) and World Wildlife Fund (WWF) organised a workshop on community-based governance in flooded savannahs in the Municipality of Paz de Ariporo (Department of Casanare, Colombia).

The objective is twofold: first, to share and evaluate results and data on the socio-economics of the region, discussing a current scenario; second, to draw guidelines that strengthen community based governance, building an expected scenario.

This workshop was part of the continuing community outreach to open dialogue among different actors and foster better understanding, acceptance and inclusion of community based governance models. At this workshop, 22 community members participated, representing civil society¹, the private² and public³ sectors.

The outcomes of the workshop will facilitate the development of local policies, socio-economic and environmental projects, plans for peacebuilding as well as the reinforcement of trust among community members.
